Summarize this page

Ask Seller Assistant

Bullet points are concise statements that highlight key product features and benefits in order to help customers make informed purchasing decisions. Well-crafted bullet points can increase product discoverability in search results and can improve conversion rates by clearly communicating essential product information. Bullet points help customers quickly understand if the product is right for them.

Bullet point guidelines

Writing guidelines for high-quality bullet points:

Component	Best practices
Capitalization	Begin with a capital letter.
Bullet point count	Include at least three bullet points.
Character length	10-255 characters per bullet point.
Formatting	Format as a sentence fragment, and don't use end punctuation.
	Use semicolons to separate phrases within a single bullet point.
Numbers	Write numbers one to nine in full, excluding names, model numbers, and measurements.
Measurements	Include a space between digit and unit (example: "60 ml").
Structure	Add a header with a colon followed by a description (example: "Cotton fabric: Made from 100% cotton").
Content focus	Highlight product features, benefits, and how the product meets customer needs. Avoid brand marketing stories.
Content consistency	Maintain data consistency across product variants. Minimize duplication with other product attributes such as title, product description, or product overview.
Claims	Avoid subjective, performance, or comparative claims unless they're verifiable on packaging. Avoid unsubstantiated award claims or consumer survey results.
References	Do not divert or refer to other products not included under the ASIN. Do not compare your product to competitor brands.

Examples of high-quality bullet points:

- Cotton fabric: Made from 100% cotton for softness and breathability
- Long sleeve: Long sleeves add coverage and style
- Loose fit: Relaxed fit allows for easy movement and comfort
- Machine washable: Durable construction allows for easy care
- Versatile style: Perfect for dance practice, playtime, or outdoor activity
